PRESS RELEASE

DATE: August 29, 2017

Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School will be offering Mandarin Chinese for the second year in 2017-2018, one of only twenty-five schools nationwide selected by the U.S. Department of State's Teachers of Critical Languages Program (TCLP) to receive a grant to host a teacher from either China or Egypt.

Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School Principal Dena DeJulius, world language teacher Deborah Page, Coventry Public Schools' Director of Teaching and Learning Michele Mullaly, and Coventry parent Susan Frarie, collaborated on this grant which is designed to increase the study and acquisition of important world languages in U.S. schools and enables Coventry's middle school to host a TCLP teacher from China for a full academic year.

Chunping Li from China has been awarded the Teachers of Critical Languages Program fellowship to teach Chinese in Grades 6-8 at Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School during the 2017-2018 school year. Ms. Li holds a B.A. in English from Hunan University of Science and Technology. She is the published author of "The Cohesion of English Teaching between Middle School English Courses and College English Course in Independent Colleges" which appeared in the Science and Culture periodical. She has been a teacher of English at Sanya Experimental

Middle School since 2007 and has taught English on the college level as well. Coventry Public Schools is hosting a reception and welcome for Ms. Li this Thursday, August 31, 2017, beginning at 5:30 p.m. in the Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School/Coventry High School Library Media Center. The community is cordially invited to attend, and light refreshments will be provided.

Deborah Page will serve as the mentor teacher for Chunping Li supporting her transition to providing instruction for Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School students. Susan Frarie, a parent of a Coventry student who has been affiliated with the American Councils of International Education, will serve as a community mentor to Chunping Li, introducing her to other community members and assisting in her social and cultural transition to living in the United States.

Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School has a long history of interest and involvement with Chinese culture and language and international exchanges with Chinese educators and students. Last year Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School was also awarded a Teachers of Critical Languages Program grant and began a Mandarin Chinese program. Coventry Public Schools established a sister school partnership with Qingdao No. 57 Middle School in Shandong in 2005, a year that began many exchanges between the two schools allowing for Qindao and Coventry to learn about each other's academic programs, instructional approaches, and opportunities for students. Most recently in 2012 and 2016, Capt. Nathan Hale hosted students and teachers from Qindao. Chinese students attended classes at CNHMS, shared their experiences and perspectives on learning, and became friends with our students. In April of 2017 and of 2013 Capt. Nathan Hale students, teachers, and a community member visited Qindao No. 57 Middle School providing them an opportunity to exchange cultural perspectives and learn more about education in China.

The Teachers of Critical Languages Program enables primary and secondary schools to strengthen their teaching of critical languages by bringing Chinese and Egyptian teachers to the U.S. to teach Chinese and Arabic language for an academic year. Launched in 2006, TCLP has provided fellowships to over 200 primary and secondary school teachers of English from China and Egypt to teach in K-12 schools throughout the United States.

In addition to teaching their native languages, TCLP exchange teachers expand the understanding of the world in their U.S. host communities by establishing strong ties with teachers, students, parents, and members of community, and by sharing information about their home countries and cultures. At the same time, the exchange teacher gains first-hand knowledge of the United States to share with students and fellow teachers in their home countries. Upon return, many of them establish lasting bonds between their U.S. host schools and their home schools in China or Egypt.

TCLP is funded by the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, which promotes international mutual understanding through a wide-range of academic, cultural, private-sector, professional, and sports exchange programs. These exchanges engage youth, students, educators, artists, athletes, and emerging leaders in the United States and in more than 160 countries. Alumni of ECA exchanges comprise of over one million people around the world, including more than 50 Nobel Laureates and more than 350 current or former heads of state and government.

TCLP is implemented by American Councils for International Education: ACTR/ACCELS, an international nonprofit organization that prepares individuals and institutions to succeed in an increasingly interconnected world. Since 1974, American Councils has responded to the needs of the communities where it works with hundreds of robust, international education programs that include academic exchanges, language immersion, testing and assessment, professional training, community development, and scholarly research.
